PENSION
APPLICATIONS
INDEX

Pensions were granted differently for Confederate soldiers.

Confederate soldiers did not receive a pension from the federal government. Their pension would have been paid, if available, from the state – but not necessarily the state they served. They could have benefits from the state they were living in.

“In 1881 Texas set aside 1,280 acres for disabled Confederate veterans.

In 1889 the State began granting pensions to indigent Confederate veterans and their widows.”

CONFEDERATE PENSIONS

Every Southern State Pays Annuities to Wearers of the Gray.

It has not been so many years ago since southern orators and politicians proudly boasted that the Confederate veterans received no pensions, and scorned to receive money for having served his country as a matter of duty and patriotism. That sort of high-sounding talk has been silenced. Every southern state pays pensions to Confederate veterans and it is entirely proper that they should. But what a change in sentiment the years have wrought! A change, also in the financial condition of many veterans and in the physical condition of all of them.

Tennessee pays $250,000 a year in pensions for Confederate veterans, and $25,000 a year in widows' pensions. In addition it maintains a soldiers' home, for which the state made an original appropriation of $25,000. Later it gave
